Comments: To the Interagency Coordinating Committee for the Validation of Alternative Methods: It concerns me and my family that animal testing has not significantly progressed or furthered positive advancements or cures in human health in many years. Re-direct taxpayers dollars into research with Animal-Free testing, so that we can actually and accurately help save human lives instead of endangering and hindering our health. Year after year, too many repetitive, useless and costly experiments conducted on animals. Too much inaccurate, unreliable, barbaric and outdated research on animals, accomplishing very little while thousands and thousands of people and animals suffer and die every year. Time to move on. Please help expedite, improve and protect human health and animal welfare by validating and accepting Animal-Free testing with more accurate alternative methods that exist and that are already available. Sincerely and Respectfully, D. Delmar
